Article 3: Child Welfare

Overview

This article clarifies that children, under specified circumstances, can remain in foster care up to age 21. Statutes related to court jurisdiction are amended to allow courts to review cases of children up to age 21 if they remain in foster care. This article also places a limit on the annual increase to foster care rates, permits the commissioner to accept donations from private postsecondary institutions, and removes a reporting requirement.

- 1 Education program; permitted ages, additional requirement. Amends § 245A.04, subd. 11, including the headnote. Permits youth over age 18 but under the age of 21, to continue to reside in a DHS licensed child foster care program, if the youth is:
 - attending high school or a program leading to a similar credential;
 - attending a postsecondary or vocational education program;
 - participating in a job readiness program;
 - employed at least 80 hours a month; or
 - incapable of any of the above due to a documented medical condition.
- 2 Donated funds from private postsecondary institutions. Amends § 256.01, by adding subd. 30. Provides the commissioner with the authority to accept funds from private postsecondary institutions as the state share for purposes of claiming Title IV-E reimbursement for the child welfare workforce professional education program. - 3 Setting foster care standard rates. Amends § 256.82. Limits any increase in child foster care maintenance or difficulty of care rates to 3 percent per annum.

Paragraph (a) permits the court to retain jurisdiction of a foster child up to age 21 for the purpose of conducting required reviews. Prohibits termination of jurisdiction without notice to the child and an opportunity to be heard. Permits the court to terminate jurisdiction if the child leaves foster care before age 21.

Paragraph (b) permits the court to terminate jurisdiction unless a court order is necessary for a child to be in foster care or continued reviews are required by statute, and jurisdiction is no longer needed to protect the child's best interests.

Paragraph (c) makes a technical change.

- 7 Court review of foster care. Amends § 260C.201, subd. 10. Adds the requirement for annual judicial reviews if a child remains in foster care to age 21, and the court has retained jurisdiction.
