Overview

In 2013, the state enacted safe harbor for exploited youth and the regional navigator grant program. The safe harbor for exploited youth program establishes a director of child sex trafficking prevention at the Department of Health and establishes a program to provide grants for regional navigators serving specific regions of the state to coordinate resources and services for sexually exploited youth.

This bill provides guidance and restrictions regarding funding used for the safe harbor for sexually exploited youth. It also requires the commissioner of human services to perform a prevalence study on survivors of sexual exploitation and trafficking. This bill appropriates money to fund the prevalence study, to fund street outreach and housing for sexually exploited youth and youth at risk of sexual exploitation, to fund the safe harbor for exploited youth, and to fund the regional navigator grant program.
