

I'm contacting you today to voice my concern and objection to the Omnibus Bill, which would require homeschool families to show proof of prior testing and turn in copies of official test scores. As a homeschooling mother of seven children, spanning over twenty six years, I have enjoyed the reduction of paperwork and requirements that came under the 2011 Homeschool Reduction Bill. Not only do I feel this is moving in the wrong direction by placing unnecessary requirements back in place, but an overstepping of boundaries, by the state, concerning our Constitutional right to privacy. I ask that you please protect the freedoms of your homeschool families in MN by voting against this proposed bill.

Signed,

Patricia Johnson
