Overview

This bill deals with insurance claims of holocaust victims and their heirs and beneficiaries. It permits the commissioner to provide special assistance to Minnesota residents who have claims against insurers for deaths or other losses related to the holocaust. It requires certain insurers to provide data for a registry of holocaust-related insurance policies. It affects primarily insurers who do business in Minnesota that issued policies in Europe prior to 1946, or that have an affiliate that did so. The bill provides jurisdiction for holocaust-related claims of Minnesota residents in the courts of this state and extends the right to sue to collect on unpaid claims until the end of 2010.

Some holocaust victims have had trouble collecting on insurance claims, especially life insurance. Some insurers have at various times required death certificates, required survivors to present the insurance policy, declined to reveal whether the decedent had a policy with that company, and argued that they have no obligation to pay if the insurer's assets and records were seized (nationalized) by certain governments during and after World War II. Homeowner's policies have also been challenging to collect on.
