Overview

This bill provides that discharge of a firearm loaded with less lethal munitions and used by a peace officer within the scope of official duties does not constitute deadly force. Less lethal munitions are projectiles which are designed to stun, temporarily incapacitate, or cause temporary discomfort to a person.

Section

1 Deadly force defined. Amends the definition of deadly force to provide that discharge of a firearm loaded with less lethal munitions and used by a peace officer within the scope of official duties does not constitute deadly force. Without this change, the intentional discharge of a firearm in the direction of another person, or at a vehicle in which another person is believed to be, would constitute deadly force.

"Less lethal munitions" mean projectiles which are designed to stun, temporarily incapacitate, or cause temporary discomfort to a person. "Peace officer" means a peace officer licensed by the board of peace officer standards and training.

Under law, deadly force may be used by a peace officer in the line of duty only when necessary:

- to protect the peace officer or another from apparent death or great bodily harm;
- to effect the arrest or capture, or prevent the escape, of a person whom the peace officer knows or has reasonable grounds to believe has committed or attempted to commit a felony involving the use or threatened use of deadly force; or
- to effect the arrest or capture, or prevent the escape, of a person whom the officer knows or has reasonable grounds to believe has committed or attempted to commit a felony if the officer reasonably believes that the person will cause death or great bodily harm if the person's apprehension is delayed.

2 Effective date. August 1, 2001.
